

AROUND AMSTERDAM 2

The Flower Market of Amsterdam has many flower shops along the canal.

Left: All buildings are required to be covered with netting when construction is underway. This is the decorated netting for this building. Right: One of the famous windmills of the Netherlands. Below: A typical street with the bike path, pedestrian walkway and street for cars with flowers.

Many of the bridges are too low. Above Top: A boat going through one of the opened bridges. Above: Even the Light Rail's electric line is moved. Right: After going back down a train passes with the electric line back in place.

The Amsterdam Botanical Gardens.

The Amsterdam Cafe: A place to smoke pot! Some have beds usually also in the front window.

Above: They also are called Coffeshops! They checked ID's to make sure patrons are 18.

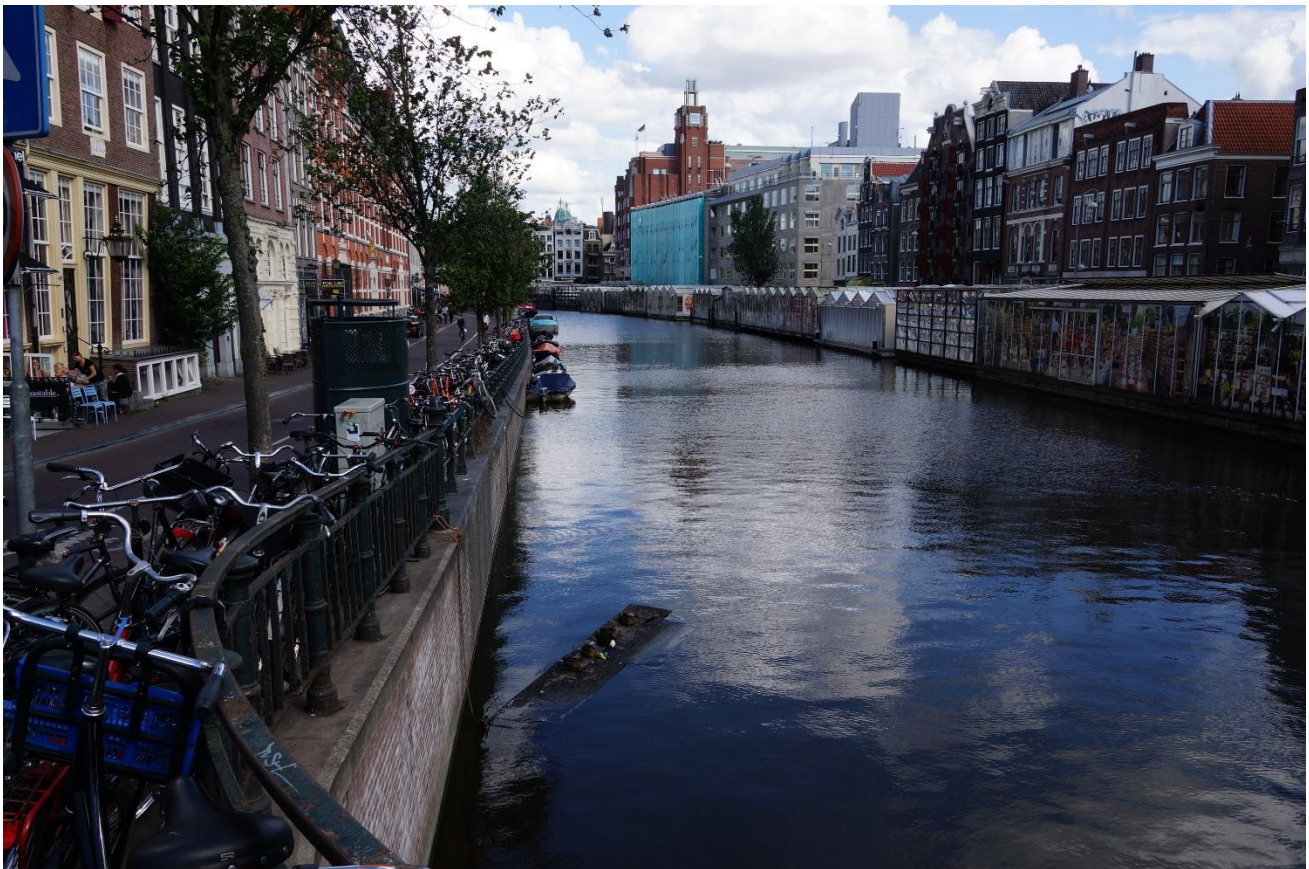

Below: There are many shops for pot paraphernalia.

Left it is free, on the right you have to pay!

Below: This canal did not allow houseboats. The Flower Market is on the right side of this canal.

Above: This is the Flea Market. We bought a painting from the artist in the foreground. Below the artist with the print we bought—20 Euros.

His painting!

One of the many small parks in the city.

One of the many unusual buildings along the many canals.

We end the walk with two views from the Ibis Hotel. Above the Central Railroad Station and below the bicycle Parking Lot in front of the hotel.
